WHY? A different type of dog training

There is no such thing as an un-trainable dog; however, some are much more difficult to deal with than others. If you believe in something, you can achieve it. Dog training is no different. These animals are not just dogs they are simply uneducated, four-legged family members. We all take the time and effort to educate our children so they will have a better life. Why not educate your pet with qualified professionals and behaviorists? Through praise, patience, and persistence, you can achieve a well trained dog. Every dog has its own personality. Even litter mates will be quite different. It is apparent that the training technique for a Yorkie must be different than the technique for a Great Dane. They respect you when you spend training time with them. Respect should never be demanded, it should be earned. Through positive leadership and controlling methods, we can produce an educated canine companion.
